Sarah Jeong (XOXO Festival/YouTube)

Sarah Jeong, who will be joining the New York Times editorial board in September, has expressed open disdain for white people in numerous tweets sent between 2013 and 2015.

Jeong's Twitter account is replete with racial insults against white people, whom she has described as "groveling goblins," "bullshit," "miserable," and "dogs."

"Dumba** f***ing white people marking up the internet with their opinions like dogs pissing on fire hydrants," Jeong wrote in November 2014. "Are white people genetically predisposed to burn faster un the sun, thus logically being only fit to live underground like groveling goblins," she wrote a month later.

Jeong, who was hired Wednesday as the Times's lead editorial writer on technology, attended Harvard Law School and has previously written for the Atlantic, Motherboard, the Washington Post, and the New York Times Magazine.

Jeong's comments, which have drawn considerable backlash among fellow journalists on Twitter, emerged months after the Times fired another new hire, Quinn Norton, over racist and anti-gay language in her old tweets.

Just hours after hiring Norton as a tech writer, the Times revoked the offer, claiming it was initially unaware of the tweets.

"Despite our review of Quinn Norton's work and our conversations with her previous employers, this was new information to us. Based on it, we've decided to go our separate ways," Times editorial-page editor James Bennet said at the time.

"I'm sorry I can't do the work I wanted to do with them. I wish there had been a way, but ultimately, they need to feel safe with how the net will react to their opinion writers," Norton tweeted after being dismissed.

The Times cast Jeong's tweets as ill-advised responses to online harassment in a statement released Thursday.

NYTimes Communications @NYTimesPR

Our statement in response to criticism of the hiring of Sarah Jeong.

Statement from The New York Times

We hired Sarah Jeong because of the exceptional work she has done covering the internet and technology at a range of respected publications.

Her journalism and the fact that she is a young Asian woman have made her a subject of frequent online harassment. For a period of time she responded to that harassment by imitating the rhetoric of her harassers. She sees now that this approach only served to feed the vitriol that we too often see on social media. She regrets it, and The Times does not condone it.

We had candid conversations with Sarah as part of our thorough vetting process, which included a review of her social media history. She understands that this type of rhetoric is not acceptable at The Times and we are confident that she will be an important voice for the editorial board moving forward.
